Institute for Health and Social Justice Internship Programs:

By design, all of the major research projects at the Institute for Health and Social Justice had an integrated training component in the form of an internship program I created in 1997. Through this internship program, I trained and mentored over 100 medical, graduate and premedical undergraduate students while they devoted one summer or two semesters to conducting research on macro-level social forces that influence infectious disease distribution and outcomes.

MAJOR RESEARCH PROJECTS:

- 2006- Currently in third year of multi-sited ethnographic research to examine the exodus of medical personnel out of Africa.
- 1995-2003 Multiple and varied research projects of the Institute for Health and Social Justice, Partners In Health. Research focused on changes in healthcare access and health outcomes related to the globalization of economies, political and corporate entities, information and technology. Research studies included: the health effects of structural adjustment policies in resource-poor countries; the impact of specific treaties within the World Trade Organization on access to life-saving medicines in countries with high HIV seroprevalence; the health effects of transnational corporations' labor practices, promotional activities and behavior vis-à-vis the environment.
- 1993-1994 Doctoral Dissertation Field Research among the Jola in Southwestern, Senegal, West Africa. Extensive ethnographic, ethnomedical and epidemiological study of changing morbidity and mortality patterns over four generations.
- 1992 Masters of Public Health Field Research among the Bassari in Eastern Senegal, West Africa. Conducted a multilocal study to examine local health effects of Ministry of Public Health reform policies.
- 1991 Research Consultant, Health Department, Manchester, Connecticut. Designed and implemented citywide study on access to health care and health-supporting services.
- 1989 Research for economic anthropologist. Translated and collected data on household production and rural-urban migration patterns among the Jola of Senegal.
